Corporate Efforts to Support the Election

Updated September 23, 2020

Abstract:
This document summarizes contributions that companies are making to ensure that the general election goes smoothly in November. Corporate contributions have been divided into three categories, listed in Sections I-III: “People” (recruiting poll workers or facilitating voting and registration), “Places” (providing voting locations, ballot drop boxes, and registration locations), and “Things” (providing PPE or financial support to election officials or voting-focused organizations). In addition, corporate coalitions which require members to make relevant pledges are listed in Section IV.

This list is necessarily incomplete; other corporations should contact azerbe@stanford.edu to add their information.

I. People

A. Paying Employees to Serve as Poll Workers

- Tory Burch, Warby Parker, and Target have announced that they will pay employees who serve as poll workers for eight hours of work.
- Compass Coffee will offer paid time off to employees working as poll workers.
- Staff for the Detroit Lions will be given Election Day as a paid day off to serve as election workers, helping to staff the Ford Field polling place.
- Old Navy and its sister brands Gap Inc., Banana Republic, Athleta, Intermix, and Janie and Jack will pay employees for eight hours of work to serve as poll workers, regardless of whether they were scheduled to work on election day.
- Best Buy is giving employees paid time off to volunteer to work at the polls.
- Under Armour is giving employees paid time off to serve as election officials.
- Wayfair is allowing its 14,000 U.S. employees to take a full paid day off to volunteer as a poll worker.
- Live Nation Entertainment is providing any active employee with a full day of paid time off to serve at the polls.
- All Facebook employees will be able to take extra paid time off to help staff polls on Election Day and participate in trainings ahead of time.

1This list includes corporations which specifically have committed paying for employees to serve as poll workers (focusing, in particular, on corporations with hourly employees). It excludes some corporations who will not open on Election Day or are giving Election Day off to all employees.
B. Other Poll Worker Initiatives

- CitizenBlue, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Minnesota’s nonpartisan civic engagement program, is encouraging employees to serve as poll workers by highlighting other associates who have done it in the past.
- Facebook will send notifications to all users who are 18 and over about how to sign up as poll workers in their states. Facebook is also offering free ad credits to state election authorities in all 50 states and Washington D.C. in order to run ads to recruit poll workers.
- GitHub’s social impact team will donate $250 on behalf of any employee that volunteers on election day to a non-profit of their choice.

C. Voter Information and Registration Initiatives

- AirBNB’s Civic Action Center uses the AirBNB platform to allow users to double-check their voter information and find local elected officials and 2020 candidates on the ballot. It also connects them to state resources to be able to register to vote, update their voter registration information, and learn how to vote early or by mail. This online center will be shared with guests and hosts, and outreach will be conducted to people traveling on election day to remind them to request an absentee ballot or to vote early.
- At its events, CMT (Country Music Television) has offered fans the chance to register to vote on tour stops, and at events like the CMT Awards.
- The Detroit Tigers and the Detroit Red Wings will use their social media platforms to share educational information about voter registration, voting by mail, election day volunteer opportunities, and ballot completion.
- The Detroit Lions will be in a series of public service announcements on applying to vote by mail and how to complete and return their ballots correctly. Other team personnel will also speak about why voting matters to them.
- Estée Lauder partnered with Turbovote. Connecting employees who are eligible to vote with Turbovote gives them help with voter registration, e-mail, and SMS reminders.
- At Eventbrite events, creators can add “Register to Vote with HeadCount” as a free ticket type for their event. Those who add the ticket receive an email about how to register, mail-in voting, checking their voter status, and getting updates and alerts on polling place, ballot, and other voting options.
- Facebook (and Instagram) launched an in-app tool to help voters find accurate voting information ahead of the 2020 election. A link to this Voting Information Center is also now attached to all posts on voting in the United States, and will also be accessible from ads about social issues, elections, or politics.
- Fenwick will provide eligible voting employees with information on how to register to vote, apply for mail-in or absentee ballots, and locate polling places.
- In collaboration with Democracy Works, Google is providing state-specific information about voter registration for anyone searching “how to register” to vote or “how to vote.”
- Within its app, Lime will prompt riders to register to vote.
- Together with the Minnesota Lynx, the Minnesota Timberwolves created an online portal to assist with voting registration, instructions, and other resources.
- The Cleveland Cavaliers hosted a voter registration day on Tuesday, September 22nd in Rocket Mortgage Fieldhouse in Cleveland. Rocket Mortgage FieldHouse also posted an online Voter’s Educational Guide as a resource for the public to learn more about the voting process, answer frequently asked questions and more.

- The Detroit Pistons, in partnership with the Michigan Secretary of State’s office, are creating a series of PSA videos using Pistons players, coaches, and personalities to educate voters, including videos discussing applying to vote by mail and “how to” videos to ensure ballots are properly filled out and returned. In addition, the team will host live voter registration and education events, and build a voter registration page into the Pistons.com website, integrated directly with the Michigan Bureau of Elections.

- H&M is putting up signs in its stores encouraging customers and staff to text a particular number, which will allow them to check their registration status or sign up to vote (in partnership with I Am A Voter). H&M has also created a separate landing page to support the ACLU’s vote by mail education tool.

- Until election day, Intermix will provide information about how to vote in their area to users who visit in-person boutiques, text a certain number, or go to the Intermix website.

- Intelligentsia Coffee has partnered with Turbovote to promote online registration efforts in their coffee bars.

- Janie and Jack will feature a book reading and additional content on their Instagram channel, to provide resources for parents to teach their kids about the importance of voting.

- The Los Angeles Clippers and the Forum provided by Chase will launch a website to help voters check their registration status, explore what’s on their ballot, research policies, and make a voting plan.

- Magic Hat Brewing and Performing Arts Company is using a limited edition “Participation Variety Pack” of beers to encourage online voter registration via a link on their website.

- MTV sponsored high school proms running registration drives, and is collaborating with nonprofits to create new polling sites on college campuses.

- The Orlando Magic hosted a voter registration drive at their Amway Center on September 22. They also plan to create and include advertising spots in each NBA playoff game dedicated to promoting greater civic engagement in national and local elections and raising awareness around voter access and opportunity.

- The Oklahoma City Thunder will hold voter registration drives inside Chesapeake Energy Arena every Saturday from September 12 to October 4. At these drives, they will allow the public to freely access computers, printers, postage, and other registration and voting resources. The Thunder corporate offices have also made voter registration forms and voting information available during regular business hours since September 14.

- Spotify created a Voter’s Booth hub to provide resources so voters can get informed, register, and make a plan to vote.

- Snapchat has implemented an in-app tool to register people to vote, reporting approximately 400,000 registrations to date.

- Starbucks is urging employees to register to vote within its mobile app. It is also providing information to customers through its app and additional website on how and where to register to vote.

- Spurs Sports & Entertainment hosted a voter registration drive at the AT&T center in San Antonio, Texas.
Target and Kraft Heinz have set up websites to guide employees on registering to vote and learning about candidates.

Under Armour launched a website to encourage employees, customers, and athletes to vote, linking them with resources like polling locations and mail-in ballot instructions.

Uber teamed up with TurboVote to help riders, eaters, drivers, and delivery people register to vote or request a vote-by-mail ballot through the Uber and Uber Eats apps. On Election Day, they will help people find their polling location within the Uber app.

D. Advertising and Get Out the Vote Efforts

Amazon Studios announced a 50 state initiative, #AllInForVoting, to get out the vote. The initiative assembled a team of 50 influential celebrities to use their platforms for voter education and mobilization. (The initiative is a larger collaboration with various voting organizations).

Attn:, a media company, premiered a Get Out the Vote video featuring Barack Obama and aired an hourlong nonpartisan comedy special on September 14, urging people to vote.

BET will roll out a series of public service announcements to encourage Black Americans to vote.

On Spotify, voters who will be voting in their first presidential election will receive messages encouraging them to register to vote from fellow first-timers. Spotify has also partnered with artists and influencers voting for the first time to curate new playlists specific to that process. Curated podcasts will feature content about civic engagement and urge listeners to get registered and vote.

Anchor, a Spotify-owned podcast creation platform, will give podcasters the opportunity to donate ad space to voter registration initiatives.

Estée Lauder disseminated a video to employees in which other employees described their philosophies behind voting.

On Voter Registration Day, September 22, Gap hosted a “Gap House Session” with pop star Jojo to remind everyone to register and vote.

iHeartMedia launched a non-partisan campaign that asked musicians, cultural influencers, athletes, and listeners to say why they were voting, which was then broadcast at iheartradio.com/vote. This initiative is also being incorporated into music events occurring between August and the election. iHeartMedia also premiered a “Why I’m Voting” podcast, which started on August 10 and will run through Election Day. That podcast features conversations with celebrities and influencers about what voting means to them.

To increase voter turnout, Kenneth Cole reached out to thousands of design students and provided three options for different pro-voting statements that they could create a “design” to express. Top entries were selected by Kenneth Cole to appear in the brand’s social media channels.

Levi Strauss will offer employees the opportunity to participate in get-out-the-vote texting campaigns by partnering with Rock the Vote.

MTV is meeting with content creators across the industry to highlight voting and civic engagement within shows.
• Paypal, Fenwick & West, and Patagonia are partnering with nonprofit Vote Forward to provide workers with letter-writing materials and voter addresses, letting their employees use working hours to write nonpartisan letters that urge infrequent voters to vote.

Michael Stars will donate $50,000 to Black Votes Matter, Vote Latino, and March On.

IV. Relevant Coalitions

- The Time to Vote coalition is a group of companies who have pledged to “giv[e] employees access to and information about early voting or vote-by-mail options, offer[p] paid time off on Election Day or mak[e] it a day without meetings.” The list of member companies is available here.
- The Civic Alliance, a collaboration between Democracy Works and the CAA foundation, “brings together and supports its member companies as they each take concrete actions that encourage internal and external audiences to participate in elections, the 2020 Census, and to be active members of their communities.” Member companies are listed here. ³
- Many companies are Power the Polls partners or founding partners.
- Over 700 companies are participating members of ElectionDay.org. Participating companies commit to publicize and distribute company-wide voter information, and provide paid time off to vote either on election day or beforehand.
  - If a participating company has offered hourly time off for voting previously, participating in ElectionDay.org requires that these hours be extended, and apply to early voting periods as well as election day.
  - Companies that have unlimited PTO policies are required to institute a “no meetings” day on election day.
  - Participating companies are listed here.

³ The list of corporate commitments in Sections I-III includes many commitments by Civic Alliance companies.
